JewishGen.org

Ancestry and JewishGen are two separate entities that entered into a partnership in 2008, resulting in an agreement that Ancestry would host JewishGen servers, and JewishGen would provide a specified number of records to be available at no cost on both sites.

1. Some databases hosted on JewishGen are not on Ancestry.com, such as the JewishGen Gazetteer, JewishGen Family Finder, JewishGen Memorial Plaques Database, KehilaLinks, message archives, full-text translation of the Yizkor Book Project, Jewish Records at the FHL and Family Tree of the Jewish People.
2. Many databases continue to be updated on JewishGen but have not been updated regularly at Ancestry.
3. JewishGen offers more search options and more flexible search results for the complexities of Jewish names.
4. On Ancestry, you can directly attach records to a family tree. On JewishGen, although you can upload a family tree in GEDCOM format to the Family Tree of the Jewish People (FTJP), you cannot attach records to it. Records found on JewishGen can only be downloaded to a hard drive or mobile device.
5. Family trees (FTJP) on JewishGen are shared with Israel's Beit Hatfutsot family tree collection and vice versa with permission of tree owner.
6. Ancestry.com has divided some JewishGen databases into smaller collections for search flexibility.
7. JewishGen offers a Discussion Group with 20,000 subscribers at <https://groups.jewishgen.org/g/main>.
